INFORMATION WANTED .- Rev. John Francis left Nashville on the steamer Cuba, on the 7th of July, for this place. He had his horse and covered buggy on board. His friends at Nashville and here are in much fear that some calamity has overtaken him. Mr. F. is a large, fleshy man. Any information in relation to him, sent to James Edmunds, Bible Revision Rooms, Louisville, Ky., will be thankfully received. He intended to come directly from Paducah or Smithland here, but although we have freely used the telegraph and mails, we have not heard a word of him. By superior force they dragged me from the house, tearing my clothes, and injuring my person slightly. I resisted, as I usually do, because I wish them to know that I do not surrender a single right willingly, and because I wish the cases might be as clearly obnoxious to law as possible. I did not attempt to injure any one; I do not at any time carry weapons. They led me off about a mile on foot—most of the mob being on horseback—some having pistols drawn part of the time. Here they rested until my horse was brought. One excellent sister, whom I shall ever remember for her kiudness, walked close by my side this distance.

My horse being brought, they resolved to take me out of the county, demanding that I should promise never to enter it again. This I plainly refused—telling them I was now in their hands controlled by superior force, but the surrender of a right or duty I should never promise. They then marched me 7 or 8 miles, amid jeers, taunts, and low vulgarity, to the town of Crab Orchard, in an adjoining county.

MESSRS. EDITORS: A letter over the signature of Capt. James F. Smith, of the steamer Northerner, appeared in the Daily Courier of the 11th ult., reflecting with severity on the Rev. S. S. Lattimore. I and others have taken some pains to ascertain from Captain Smith, and his clerk, Mr. Archer, the proof of the allegations published. These being incomplete in their form and force, as yet, I would suggest that the public suspend any definite being incomplete in their form and force, as yet, I would suggest that the public suspend any definite expression of opinion on the subject until Mr. Lattimore shall have time and the necessary facilities for a full defense. It is highly probable that the whole subject will undergo a legal investigation.—Mr. Lattimore has for twenty years been one of the ablest and most successful ministers in Mississippi. I have known him for fourteen years, and I know of no man for whom I have cherished a higher regard. With his own denomination he has always maintained a character entirely above suspicion.—He is not the man to lie under charges of this kind if he is innocent. At any rate, the facts will be if he is innocent. At any rate, the facts will be thoroughly investigated, and presented in proper form and in due time to the public.

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

Gentlemen: A few days since I learned from an article which appeared in the Louisville Courier that Gen. Leslie Combs made, in a speech at Nicholasville recently, some most unwarrantable statements of facts in repard to an arrangement entered into between the Louisville and Lexington Railroad and the Kentucky Stage Company. Happealed to the citizens of Jessandine and other counties to know if they have money to buy stages, horses, &c., to put on a line of stages to connect with his road; will they permit his (Gen. Combs's) road, the "Kentucky Centaal, 2d Division from Lexington to the Tennessee State line," to be broken down, or will they rise en masse and put down such an unboly combination as exists between the Lexington and Louisville Railroad Company, the Kentucky Stage Company, and the Hotels in Lexington? He charges that the Kentucky Stage Company have sold out the South for a dollar a head to the said rail oad and hotels. What are the facts? Gen. Combs has made a contract with the Covington and Lexington Railroad to operate his (Gen. Combs's) road for a certain portion of the gross receipts. With the view of carrying out this contract, the Covington and Lexington Railroad Company may propositions to the Kentucky Stage Company to stop their stages at Nicholasville, to sell tickets at their (the Stage Company's) offices in Danville, Lancaster, Harrodsburg, and other places, and decline selling those of the Lexington and Louisville roads. I have understood also that, if they succeeded it was their intention so to run their trains as to To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

cut off any direct connection between Nicholasville and Louisville, and thereby force the travel by and to Cincinath. I have heard further that the said Covington and Lexington Railroad Company have so arranged their freight tariff as to force all the people of Jessamine and Garrard and Boyle on to do their business in Cincinnati or pay an additional price for transportation for the privilege of trading at Louisville.

The Louisville and Lexington roads, finding that Gen. Combs's road was to be operated for the exclusive benefit of Cincinnati and the Cincinnati line of roads, made an effort to place themselves in as favorable a position as possible to secure the travel and business of the counties of Jessamine, Garrard, Boyle, and Mercer. They effected an arrangement with the Kentucky Stage Company by which tickets from Danville, Lancaster, Richmond, Mt. Sterling, Harrodsburg, and other places could be sold to Louisville and all points in the West, South, and Northwest at one dollar less than the fare heretofore charged and at less rates than they can be had via Cincinnati.

The people of those counties are thus enabled to patronize a line from which they were to be excluded, and at less rates than they kave heretofore paid.

The Kentucky Stage Company are entitled to the thanks of the people of those counties for refusing to combine with the Cincinnati and Lexington Rahroad and force them to trade and travel upon a line of roads against their interests and inclinations.

Will the people of those counties give their aid and patronage to break down a stage line which is working for their benefit, or will they not rather discountenance any effort to bolster up a combination to force them to travel and to whom does Gen. Combs desire to sell them? The abolitionists of Cincinnati. By the arrangements at present made between the Kentucky Stage Company and the Louisville and Lexington Rahroads, the Stage Company connects at Lexington daily with the Louisville and Lexington care, by which hassengers are ticketed from t

ATHENS, Tenn., July 6 1857. GENTLEMEN: Last March I set out an orchard of GENTLEMEN: Last March I set out an orchard of about twelve hundred apple trees. They are all growing finely with the exception of those the rabbits barked. And I flatter myself that I would not have lost any scarcely if I had not followed the old practice in the country. I greased some with old bacon rind and pepper. But it appears that they devoured these with more relish than those that had nothing on them at all.

Others I rubbed with soft soap. This answered very well as long as the soap stayed on the trees.

Others I rubbed with soft soap. This answered very well as long as the soap stayed on the trees, but it soon washed off and did no good (only as manure for the trees). The most of them I wrapped with hemp bagging (cotton-baling) about a foot or more from the ground. Now the question is, whether this bagging injures the trees during spring and summer or not. I know that it answered a good purpose for protecting the trees when plowing. If you or any of your subscribers can give me information you will much oblige yours truly, V. M. METCALFE.

REMARKS .- Thousands of young fruit trees are nnually destroyed by rabbits. The plan pursued by our correspondent of wrapping bagging around them is effectual, but the wrapping ought to be removed in the spring, as the trees are liable to be much injured during the growing season, not only by the pressure of the bandage as the trees grow, but also by stopping the healthy functions of the bark.

Various remedies have been recommended. Soft oap is effectual as long as it stays on, but it is too liable to wash off. Blood is equally efficacious and will stay on much longer. Some persons rub their young trees with the livers of hogs, saved for that purpose when they kill, and probably this is as effectual and easy of application as any other remedy. Another plan is to take polk-stalks (where they are found large enough), cut them to suitable lengths, and, when a little damp, slit them on one side and pass them round the body of the tree. With many persons this is the easiest mode of protecting them. Corn-stalks split into sections and tied on with a string or straw band will do as well when no polkstalks are at hand, or a handful of straw cut to the proper length will answer a good purpose. It must be remembered that a snow may enable the rabbit to reach pretty high, and it is when the ground is covered with snow that they do most damage. The protection should, therefore, be at least two feet up

STIRRING THE SOIL IN DROUTHS .- It is generally understood by all practical men that nothing promotes the healthy growth and maturity of corn and other crops so much as frequent stirring of the soil, particularly in dry weather. Some very interesting experiments, made last year, go to prove that it is the condition of the surface of the soil that affects the growing crop. The nearer the surface is to perfectly fine dust, the greater protection from injurious evaporation will it afford. If, in reducing the surface to this condition, the soil is stirred to the depth of several inches, the growing crop is greatly benefited by the admission of air among the soil, but should it already be in a light, friable condition, the greatest amount of good can be accomplished by the process which shall most effectually pulverize the surface only, because each portion of fresh, moist soil turned up by this process soon loses by evaporation its moisture, and it is thus lost to the

HOUGHTON'S SEEDLING GOOSEBERRY. - The extensive culture of this valuable fruit bids fair to add greatly to the resources of the housewife. Until within a few years it was a rare thing to see a gooseberry in our markets. If any were brought, they were the common wild varieties, not much larger than a marrowfat pea. This season they have been abundant and cheap, and, of the large quantity sold, probably ninety-nine hundredths were of the Houghton's seedling. It is very extensively grown, and, from its good qualities and productiveness, its culture must be very profitable. They are generally sold in the market green, but, when the supply becomes more abundant, no doubt they will be brought in as ripe fruit. Coming as they do at a time when other fruits are scarce, they furnish no mean addition to the des-

The productiveness of this variety is wonderful. Bushes only two years old were this season perfectly weighed down with fruit, yet there is no appearance of blight upon any. This freedom from blight is found constant in all parts of the country, and will ultimately enable them to supplant entirely the larger European sorts.

There is a field for much interesting experiment in producing seedlings from this fruit, and amateurs will be well paid for their attention to it. A large fruited gooseberry, free from blight, would be a valuable acquisition.

TURNIP FLY.—A correspondent writes that he has, for the past three years, at the recommendation of an experienced gardener, s'wn a row of mustard seed between every two rows of ruta bagas, as a remedy for the fly. The result has been very gratifying. The mustard came up first, and appeared to be preferred by the flies—at all events, they fed upon it till the ruta bagas were out of harm's way. Our correspondent thinks it better to sow the mustard between the rows, because it can the more easily be destroyed by the horse hoe. If the ruta bagas are singled out in the rows with the hoe—as they always should be—we do not see any objection to sowing the mustard and ruta baga seed together, in the same drill. Perhaps, however, our correspondent is right.—Genesee Farmer.

ENTOMOLOGY—No. X.—Borer in Apple Trees—The Buppestis.—In the fifth volume of the Country Gentleman, page 345, W. M. T., of Jessamine co., Ky., asks for information respecting a worm which has done great injury in his orchard of young apple trees, some of the trees being entirely killed by it. He has not been able to find this worm; but we gather from his account that it invariably commences its depredations upon the south side of the young tree, generally about a foot above the ground, and feeds upon the inner bark and outer wood, filling the cavity which it makes with its castings, and at the end of its burrow it penetrates inward into the solid wood, the only external indication of its destructive work being the dark color of the outer surface of the bark.

A letter from S. Moore, Esq., of Kensington, Conn., states that a worm, answering in all respects to the above account, is at present very troublesome in his and other orchards in his vicinity. He has repeatedly found the worm in its burrow under the bark. It is usually from a half to three-fourths of an inch in length. He and others are very desirous to know what insect this is.

We wish Mr. M. had sent us specimens of this worm, and of the wood showing its operations. We feel much like the Israelites under their Egyptian task-masters—brick required of us, and no straw given us with which to make them. We have never seen an apple tree depredated upon in the manner above described. From what is stated of it, the insect would appear to be a species of the family Buprestide, or the brilliant snapping beetles, many of the larvæ of which mine a flat or shallow burrow in the sap-wood of the trees which they infest, immediately under the bark, which burrow is com-

Buprestidae, or the brilliant snapping beetles, many of the larvæ of which mine a flat or shallow burrow in the sap-wood of the trees which they infest, immediately under the bark, which burrow is commonly winding or serventine, and becomes more broad as the worm increases in size, and as its broadest end has a hole sunk in the solid wood, in which the insect lies during its pupa state. And it is most probable this insect is the Thick-legged Buprestis. Specimens of this beetle, from an orchard in Michigan, were sent to the office of the Country Gentleman last summer, for information as to its name, and I am indebted to Mr. Barry, of Rochester, for pieces of wood containing the larvæ. But my information respecting this insect, the dates when its transformations occur, &c., is by no means complete. I propose, however, to present such an account of it as will enable Mr. Moore to ascertain whether this is the insect which is infesting his orchard. And if it is not, we hope he will not fail of forwarding us specimens of his insect, that will enable us to ascertain what it is. The perfect insect can probably be obtained by selecting a young tree which is fatally wounded by these worms, sawing it off above where the worms are nestling, and drawing a small bag or cap made of gauze, or of the netting used for musquito bars, over the stump, and tieing its mouth below where the worms are reposing. Or, without cutting the tree down, netting may be sewed in the form of a cylinder around the trunk, and its ends tied in such a manner that the insects will be inprisoned within it when they emerge from the wood. form of a cylinder around the trunk, and its ends tied in such a manner that the insects will be im-prisoned within it when they emerge from the wood. And all other worms which are found burrowing in the wood or bark of the trees, the reader should know, may be obtained in their perfect state in the same way, except a few kinds which leave the wood and bury themselves in the ground to pass their pupa state.

Those insects which people commonly call snap-bugs, or snapping beetles, from their having the faculty of giving a sudden snap or spring whereby many of them are able to throw themselves over when laid upon their backs, form two extensive families of the order Coleoptera. One of these fam-ilies, named Elaters (Elateridæ), are nearly all of duil colors, black, liver, brown, or chestnut. The other, named Buprestians, are mostly of highly pol-ished metallic colors, many of them being among the most splendid and brilliant of any insects known. It is to the latter family, as already inti-mated, that the insect we are about to describe be-longs.

Next to the common apple tree borer (saperda bivittata), the most common borer in the trunks of apple trees in our country, is the Thick-legged Buprestis, named chrysobothris femorata, by entomologists, from its anterior thighs, which are remarkably If the surface soil is in the condition of fine dust it acts as a mulch to the roots of the growing plant, retaining its moisture, and absorbing and transmitting the heat. The true policy of culture is to put the soil in fine condition early in the season—to keep up this fine condition by repeated workings during the early stages of its growth, but after the plant has attained considerable size, and the season of drouth has set in, it would be better to aim at the pulverization of the surface only. forced to select other trees on which to deposit its eggs, for the purpose of continuing its species. And not only the apple but peach trees are attacked, and young trees are sometimes killed by it.

The perfect insect is a flatish oblong beetle, half an inch in length or somewhat less, with its head sunk deep into its thorax, the thorax being more broad than long and rounded at its sides. It is of a shining black color, and of a firm hard consistence, and on each of its wing-covers the naked eye can disc-rn three raised lines, running lengthwise, the two outer lines being interrepted by two impressed spots, which appear as though they were stamped upon the surface by means of a seal. When the wing-covers are spread apart, the back beneath them is seen to be of a beautiful brilliant green color. The under side and legs are like burnished copper, the feet being deep green.

These beetles make their appearance upon the translate interest during the popular and

These beetles make their appearance upon the trees they infest during the months of June and July, running in the hot sunshine up and down the trank and branches upon their south side and dropping their eggs in the crevices of the bark. The worms which hatch from these eggs feed upon the soft sap-wood immediately under the bark, and probably upon the inner layers of the bark also, formsoft sap-wood inmediately under the bark, and pro-bably upon the inner layers of the bark also, form-ing a shallow wide cavity between the bark and the wood. When they approach maturity they fill the cavity which they have formed with their castings and sink themselves deeper in the solid wood, form-ing not a round but a long narrow hole, and only deep enough for the worm to be contained within it. Many of the insects of this family pass two or three years in their larva state, and it may be the same with this species.

These worms or larvee in their form bear some resemblance to a tadpole or to a battledoor, being quite broad anteriorly and suddenly narrowed into a long gradually tapering tail consisting of several joints. They have no feet, and are very flat both on their upper and under sides, appearing as though the bark had been pressed down and distorted them. They are pale yellowish with two small black points jutting out in front, which are the jaws. A figure of this larva and a more full description of the species than what is here presented with some account of than what is here presented, with some account of a parasitic worm which destroys it, will be found in my report on noxious insects, published in the last volume of the transactions of the New York State Agricultural Society.

Agricultural Society.

To enable us to devise the best modes for combatting this or any other insect, it is necessary that we have full information respecting its history and habits. But from the analogy furnished by similar insects with which we are acquainted, we may be able to suggest remedies to which resort can be had until further investigations shall make known to us others which will be more convenient and effectual which will be more convenient and effectual.

which will be more convenient and effectual.

Wherever, by the discoloration of the bark or any other sign, one of these worms is found to be present, the bark should be cut away until the worm is reached, when it should be destroyed. The wound which is thus made in the bark will by no means injure the tree so much as the worm will fit it allowed to remain. But it is probable that before the worms can be discovered by any external appearances they will have done much injury, especially if several are present in the same tree. Hence it is most important that we should have some resort by which to wholly shield the tree from the attack of these insects. One mode of thus protecting it will be to impregnate the bark with some substance which will not be injurious to the tree and which will at the same time repel these insects from it. The parent has the instinct to discover whether her progeny can subsist where she places them, and probably will never deposit her eggs in situations where the young will perish. It appears to be well established that all alkaline substances are poisonous to the larvæ of insects, whilst they also promote the health and vigor of vegetation. By alkaline substances the reader will understand me as referring to different preparations of the "fixed alkalies," potash and soda, and not to the whole class of chemical substances to which the term alkali is extended. We thus have every reason to believe that these ical substances to which the term alkali is extended. We thus have every reason to believe that these beetles will not deposit their eggs upon the bark of a tree which is impregnated with alkaline matter. One of the most convenient and economical substances with which thus to tincture the bark of trees is the common soft soap found in all our houses. It probably is not till towards the close of their lives in the month of July that these beetles deposit their eggs. Therefore, if about the last of June the bark of apple and peach trees be rubbed with soap, or if this substance be placed in the forks of the larger limbs, from whence it will be washed downwards upon the bark by the rains, these insects I doubt not will discover it and will forsake every tree which is thus treated.

Hybridizing of Playrs.—This subject is yearly attracting more attention among cultivators, and has already been turned to profitable account in the production of some of our finest varieties of fruit and vegetables. Every plant seems to be endowed by the Creator with a capacity for almost unlimited improvement. At least the limits of perfection have not yet been re ched, and those who have made this matter their study have the most faith in the improvements of plants. The amateur, from his extensive requaintance with varieties, knows what is wanted in a given fruit, and can go to work intelligently to produce a new variety, that possess the desideratum. Nature has set the limits to his efforts, and wisely directs him to the points where he may make improvements. An apple may not be crossed upon a pear, so as to produce a new fruit, having the qualities of both the parents. But one variety of pear may be crossed upon another variety, so as to produce a new fruit, that shall not only have certain qualities of the respective stocks, from which it was taken, but certain original qualities unlike so as to produce a new fruit, that shall not only have certain qualities of the respective stocks, from which it was taken, but certain original qualities, unlike any other variety. Fruit trees are improveable in the time of their coming into bearing, and in the character of their wood and foliage, in the time of ripening their fruits, in their size, appearance, and quality. We have no one pear that unites in itself every desirable quality. And if we had such a pear for the summer months, we should want to produce another equally good for each season of the year, so that all the circuit agranouths should bring their tribute of perfect fruit to reward the skill and industry of man.

Some pear trees, which produce very fine fruit, are very slow growers and come into bearing very late. It would be a desirable thing to produce another variety, with all their good qualities, making wood rapidly and producing fruit in five years from the bud, instead of fifteen. The Seckle is perhaps the highest flavored of pears, but it is a slow grower, and the fruit is very small. If we could have a seedling Seckle, that would retain all the flavor of its parent, and give us the rapid growth of the Bartlett, its early bearing and the size of its fruit, it would be a great improvement. The Doyenne d'Ete is the earliest of our summer pears, but it is small. Could its size be doubt dit would be a great addition to our summer fruits. The months of August, September, October, and November are already well supplied with excellent pears. Fine winter pears, that ripen with little trouble and prolong their season into the spring months, are still scarce. Pears ripening very early or very late should now receive the attention of our best cultivators. We have not a few amateurs in this country who are giving special attention to this fuit. They are Some pear trees, which produce very fine fruit, are receive the attention of our best cultivators. We have not a few amateurs in this country who are giving special attention to this fuit. They are producing new seedlings from fruits that were carefully crossed under their own supervision and patiently testing their qualities. It is a work of years to produce a new pear, to test the qualities of its wood and fruit, so as to give an intelligent epinion of its whole character, but there is no field of study and labor more inviting to a gentleman of intelligence and wealth, who can give it his personal at tention.

Some errors prevail upon the hybridizing f plants, which it is worth while to correct. It is not uncommon to hear farmers asserting that potatoes will mix by being planted together. They believe that a white potato planted near a red one would be likely to impart something of its qualities to its neighbor, and that the produce of either variety would not and that the produce of henceforth be true to its kind. But there can be no mixing of plants by this method. The pollen of one variety would affect the blossom of another, and the seeds formed from the impregnated blossom would produce potatoes of a new kind. And this is the reason why such a great variety of potatoes will come of the seeds taken from a single potato ball. All our first seedlings are produce in this way, and, so far as we have learned, have been the result of chance crossing. All plants and vegetables of the same genus, whose period of blossoming is at the same date, are susceptible of hybridization, in intermixture, by means and through the agency of blossoms and in no other way. The pistils of the blossoms of one variety receive the fertilizing pollen from the stamens of another, and the seed which matures necessarily contains the germ of the variety with which it has become impregnated by the interthe seeds formed from the impregnated ble with which it has become impregnated by the inter-

The knowledge of this law of hybridizing is as The knowledge of this law of hybridizing is as necessary to retain old varieties in their purity as it is to originate new varieties. The melons, squashes, and cucumbers are continually degenerating, from the ignorance or carelessness of this law. If you have a desirable vine of squash, it is a matter of great importance to retain pure seed for another year. This can only be done with some care and pains taking. The process is so simple that an in-telligent child can understand it and attend to the work of crossing. On the vine of the squash you will observe in the female blossom the young squash already formed before the blossom opens. You can easily tell by observation when this blossom is to open. On the morning of the day it unfolds, take a piece of lace and completely cover the blossom, so as out off the access of all insects. The lace may be to cut off the access of all insects. The lace may be made into a little leag, with a string to draw up the mouth closely. When the blossom unfolds, look for a male blossom, which has been similarly guarded, and with a camel's hair pencil bring some of its pollen and apply to the pistil of the female flower. Replace the lace, and in a short time the corollo will close of itself, and the bag can be removed. The work is done hard the sage can be removed. The work is done hard the sage can be removed. The work is done hard the specimens of fruit thus treated by strick had was a stake. You will first them true to the kind. This of course is some trouble, but what cultivator that appreciates his calling will refuse to take it in order to have genuine seed.—[ED. to cut off the access of all insects. The lace may be

The Mexican population of Stockton celebrated St. John's Day by equestrian exercises, the chief sport consisting in burying a rooster in the earth, with the exception of the head, which was left out. They then rode at full speed past the poor fowl, each one endeavoring to catch the rooster's head by leaning over almost to the ground while passing. The feat requires great dexterity, as well as training on the part of the horse. The successful sportsman, after jerking the fowl from its premature burial place, commenced "slashing about," beating every one within his reach with his trophy, until it was wrested from him by another, who continued the same "sport," and the unfortunate fowl was soon torn to pieces. The beating received in this pastime is received in the best possible humor, and each horseman exerts himself to the utmost that he may be the first to get possession of the rooster.

A letter from Col. ALLEGED CURE FOR SMALLPOX.—The consul of the United States at the Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, the United States at the Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, has transmitted to the Department of State a very interesting communication from Dr. R. Landell, of Port Alegre, claiming the discovery of a cure for the smallpox. Dr. Landell states that the idea of using the remedy to be mentioned first occurred to him during a terrible epidemic of this disease in 1837, but that he first administered it in 1842, since which time his success, and that of his son, Dr. John Landell, and other colleagues in the treatment of smallpox, have been most fiattering. As the Secretary of State has communicated Dr. Landell's paper entire to the leading journal of the medical profession in the United States, it is only necessary for our purpose to extract that portion of the paper which discloses the remedy and its proper exhibition:

"Dissolve the vaccine that is contained on a pair of plates or a capillary tube, which is about four or six drops of vaccine lymph, in 4 or 6 ounces of cold and give to the patient a table spoonful every two or three hours.
"The favorable result of this exhibition is that it mitigates the symptoms, modifies the species, and cures the small pox.

"I recognise that as vaccine applied externally prevents the small pox, so, also, being taken inwardly, in the manner above indicated, it cures quickly and efficaciously the small pox in all its stages.

These effects are superior to my expectation, and even to my comprehension; in fact, the vaccine neu-tralizes the variolic virus, or one morbid action de-stroys the effects of another. By this treatment I have seen disappear the fever, delirium, hoarteness, diarrhea, pneumonia, cerebral congestion, and the secondary fever.

An Incident of Balaklava.—When the light brigade was preparing for action, the butcher of the 17th lancers, who had just been performing his office, slaughtering sheep and exen, made his appearance in the field, without coat or waistcoat, his shirt sleeves rolled up, and his arms and face smeared with blood—a grotesque and terrible figure. He mounted a powerful charger and rode up to his troop. He had no business there, but the prospect of a bloody fray was too strong to be resisted. He geized two sabres, deliberately examined the temper and edges of the blades, selected the sharpest, and threw the other aside. He then with equal cockness took out a short black pipe, charged it, lighted it, placed it in his mouth, and, settling himself in the saddle, rode with the "six hundred" into the Valley of the Shadow of Death. TROUBLE BETWEEN RAFTMEN AND THE STEAMER GALENA.—The Galena Advertiser of a late date has the following particulars of the late difficulty between the steamer Galena and some raftmen, which it obtained from Mr. Vinden, clerk of the steamer Northern Belle: steamer Northern Belle:

When the Galena landed at Reed's Landing on Tuesday last, two raftmen who had not paid for their passage started to go ashore. Mr. Holliday, clerk of the steamer, requested payment; they refused, and when he again demanded their fare, one of them struck at him with a slungshot, which fortunately missed him. The captain, who had witnessed the scene, informed them they had better pay their fare and prevent trouble. After some words, one of them struck at Capt. Laughton with the slungshot, which he dodged, and then knocked the man off from the gangway into the river. The man scrambled out he dodged, and then knocked the man off from the gangway into the river. The man scrambled out and ran up into the town, and was pursued, but secreted himself. The crew then proceeded to discharge the freight on board for Reed's Landing, and while doing so a number of raftmen, who had been collected, marched down to the levee and commenced an attack upon the crew and the boat with rocks and other missiles.

A general melee ensued, iu which passengers took an active part. Capt. Laughton was considerably hurt by a stone striking him in the breast. Some of the passengers had firearms and used them freely, and wounded two of the raftmen. Another was struck on the head with a rock and dangerously wounded. They were finally beaten off, but when the boat shoved off from the shore they rallied again and fired some shots into the steamer, doing, howand fired some shots into the steamer, doing, how-ever, but little damage. No one on board the boat was seriously injured in the melee. The raftmen, when the Northern Belle came down, were making preparations to renew their attack upon the return of the Galena. Several rafts had been stopped and their crews detained to take part in the affray .their crews detained to take part in the affray.—
They had endeavored to obtain a cannon from North Pekin, but it was refused them. The people of Wabashaw and the best citizens of Reed's Landing, together with the Sheriff of the county, were determined to sustain Capt. Laughton, whom they exculpated from blame in the matter.

DREADFUL OCCURRENCE—A Boy eaten up by a Bear almost within the City Limits.—We have succeeded with some difficulty in learning the particulars of a shocking occurrence which took place on the Hamtramck marshes on last Tuesday, in which a boy, eleven years old, was actually eaten up alive by a bear, within sight of the city. The circumstances of the case are as follows; A man named Joseph Rademacher, a German, living on Macomb street, between Rivard and Russell, went out on street, between Rivard and Russell, went out on Tuesday morning, in company with a little broth-er, to pick raspberries. They carried their dinners with them and went some five or six miles out, before commencing their day's work. Rademacher deposited his dinner basket and coat on the ground, and employed himself for some time in picking berries, when, his attention being attracted by a noise, he looked around, and, to his intense astonishment, saw a large she bear, accompanied by three cubs, engaged in devouring his dinner. It was but the work of a moment to drop his basket of berries, and hurry, with his younger brother, away from the spot. He saw two boys not far from him when he left the spot, but said nothing to them. Before himself and brother had got a safe distance, they heard terrible screams in the direction they had left, which only served to accelerate their pace, and place a greater distance between them and danger. They were soon overtaken by one of the boys, who with them and went some five or six miles out, be-They were soon overtaken by one of the boys, who came rushing after them in a bewilderment of fright, screaming out that the bear was eating his brother. Rademacher received this intelligence in utter dismay, and took to his heels with a will, followed by the two boys, and deserting the sufferer to his fate. The cowardly race soon brought them to the city, when they spread the alarm, and a large party was quickly formed for the rescue, which pro-ceded to the scene of the disaster, accompanied by Rademacher and the father of the unfortunate boy. A long search resulted in finding the remains of the boy, the bear having eaten up about half of the corpse and buried the remainder for a future meal. Remnants of his clothes were found scattered around, together with Rademacher's coat, torn to -Detroit Free Press.

How They Marry and Live.—A young man meets a pretty face, falls in love with it, courts it, marries it, goes to housekeeping with it, and boasts of having a home and a wife to grace it. The chances are nine to one that he has neither. Her chances are nine to one that he has neither. Her pretty face gets to be an old story or becomes faded or freckled or fretted; and as the face was all he wanted, all he paid attention to, all he sat up with, all he bargained for, all he swore to love, honor, and protect, he gets sick of his trade, knows a dozen faces which he likes better, gives up staying at home evenings, consoles himself v ith cigars, oysters and politics, and looks upon his home as a very ters, and politics, and looks upon his home as a very indifferent boarding-house. A family of children grow up about him; but neither he nor his "face" know anything about training them, so they come up helter-skelter; made toys of when babies, dolls when boys and girls, drudges when young men and women; and so passes year after year, and not one quiet, happy, homely hour is known throughout the entire household.

Another young man becomes enamored of a "tortune." He waits upon it to parties, exchanges bul-let doux with it, pops the question to it, gets "yes" from it, takes it to the parson's, weds it, calls it "wife," carries it home, sets up an establishment with it, introduces it to his friends, and says—poor-fellow!—that he, too, is married and has got a home. It's false. He is not married, and has no home; and he soon finds it out. He is in the wrong box, but it is too late to get out of it. He might as well hope to escape from his coffin. Friends congratulate him, and he has to grin and bear it. They praise the house, the furniture, the cradle, the Bible, the new baby, and then bid the "fortune" and he who husbands it good morning! as if he had known a good morning since he and that gilded fortune were falsely declared to be one.

Take another case. A young lady is smitten with a pair of whiskers. Curled hair never before had such charms. She sets her cap for them; they take.
The delighted whiskers make an offer, proffering The delighted whiskers make an offer, profering themselves both in exchange for one heart. The dear miss is overcome with magnanimity, closes the bargain, carries home the prize, shows it to pa and ma, calls herself engaged to it, thinks there never was such a pair of whiskers before, and they are married. Married! Yes, the world calls it so, and we will. What is the result? A short honeymoon, and then they unluckily discover that they are as unlike as chalk and cheese, and not to be made one, though all the preachers in Christendom pronounce it so.—New Haven Palladium.

CARRYING A VERDICT BY STRATAGEM.-The following plan is stated to have been pursued by some officials at the late Worcester sessions (England) officials at the late Worcester sessions (England) to hasten the decision of a refractory jury, who were locked up to consider their verdict. It was past supper time, and the court officials had no relish to pass the night in waiting upon the twelve good men who were so excessively conscientious. A large dish of beefsteaks, fried onions, giving off a body of aroma sufficient to fill the largest hall in England, was brought into the passage close to the door of the unhappy jurymen's prison. The bailiff, who wished the "standouts" at Jericho, opened the door; the cover was taken off the dish; the aroma of the steaks and onions floated in; it invaded and pervaded every square inch of the Black Hole, and the jury's nasals were violently affected. Mere mortal Englishmen could not long stand out against such a remembrance of supper. A second opening of the door and an advancement of the dish enabled the jury to find a verdict.

New Enterprise.—We are credibly informed that a number of gentlemen of this town are about to purchase a ship to be engaged in the capture of the "sea elephant," to sail under the command of Capt. Israel Morey, late of the barque Phenix, of this port. These animals average from one to two barrels of oil apiece, and are found in the largest numbers, we believe, on the Desolation Islands. This business has been successfuly prosecuted by New London people, and we trust will prove equally profitable to Nantucket capitalists. A ship sailing in this business is accompanied by a schooner, as a tender, it being necessary to go nearer the shore than would be safe for a larger vessel. The method of capturing is similar to that of the seal.

[From the Indianapolis Sentinel of August 3.] Arrest of a Gang of Dealers in Counterfeit Bank Notes and Bogus Coin in Rush, Henry, Bartholomew, Deca-tur, and Delaware counties.

tur, and Delaware counties.

The statements we gave in our paper of Saturday, taken from the Lafayette Courier and Cincinnati Commercial, in reference to the discovery and arrest of a number of men in the above-named counties in this State, who have hitherto occupied respectable positions in society, for the crime of dealing in and passing counterfeit bank notes and bogus coin, are, in the main, true. Some of the citizens of Henry and Rush counties, who had occasion to suspect that those operations were going on in their midst, secured the services of Mr. William Reany, of Cincinnati, an accomplished detective police officer, to fix the crime and arrest the guilty parties in these nefarious transactions. Before the arrest he was engaged about three weeks, with the aid of a was engaged about three weeks, with the aid of a young man brought with him from Cincinnati as a decoy, in securing the information necessary to convict the arrested parties. Enough information has been developed to make it certain that there is an extensive and well organized association throughout this State, Ohio, and Kentucky, composed of men who stand fair, who are engaged in the selling and passing of counterfeit and bogus currency. When it was known that the arrests were made, several citizens of Rush and Henry counties suddenly found business in Morgan county and left, and one physician informed his wife that he was compelled to go to "mill," but has not been heard from since his departure. The officers are continuing their search for was engaged about three weeks, with the aid of a cian informed his wife that he was compelled to go to "mill," but has not been heard from since his departure. The officers are continuing their search for guilty parties, with fair prospects of making other arrests. One individual left his luggage at the Galt House, in this city, to be called for, but has not yet thought it best to return for it.

The first individual arrested was Dr. Patterson, of Carthage, Rush county, who has had an extensive practice in that section of the country. He is represented as a man of about 48 years of age, malicious and dangerous, and has been in the habit of carrying revolvers and bowie-knives for the purpose of intimidation. He admitted, after his arrest, that he had been engaged in the business first, he says, for the purpose of detecting some men whom he supposed were engaged in it, but finding it profitable he continued it. He was decoyed to sell some cuarterfeit $10 bills on the Northwestern Bank of Virginia, a dangerous counterfeit, and after the sale of he continued it. Doctor where the balance of the $100 was he had agreed to sell, and he informed him it was under the cover of a stand in his office. It was found there, with other packages concealed, amounting to $250. A trap door into an attic story was opened, the officer reached up, found three bottles marked quinine, in which were found rolls of counterfeit bank bills. Rolls of old newspapers were also found there containing 120 bogus half dollars. A celler was discovered under his bed room, the only access to which was a small trap-door in the floor, at the side of the bed, covered by a carpet. It was a complete dungeon, without light, but fitted up with table, chairs, &c., in good order for business. The officers found secreted in various parts of his office packages of counterfeit bills and bogus coin. Letters were found in his possession from different packages of counterfeit bins and logist coin. Leters were found in his possession from different members of the gang containing information, in which the real meaning was concealed in slang phrases well known to the profession.

worst habits. He has a wife and chind, but did not associate with them. He are and slept in his office, where he was visited by abandoned females. More than a hundred indecent daguerreotypes of himself and his female friends were found in his office.

The Doctor was examined before a justice of the peace in Rushville, recognized in the sum of $3,000, and committed in default of bail.

and committed in default of bail.

The next person arrested was Dr. Rogers, of Knightstown, a man with a large family and respectably connected. He has no business, but represents himself as a sporting gentleman. He had, also, been engaged in selling Northwestern Bank of Virginia bank notes. In searching him they found a $10 new counterfeit bill on the Hatters' Bank, Conn. He was secured by the officers.

The next one arrested was Perry Bennett, of St. Omar, who has been a terror of the country. He had knocked down a sheriff when about to arrest him, and was under indictment for assault and battery with intent to kill the sheriff of the county, but county officers were a fraid to arrest him. He is also a fugitive from jastice from Illinois. He was arrested by Mr. Reany and his posse, and $20 in new counterfeit bills on the Reading Bank, Penn., was found upon him. He was taken to Rushville and committed for having counterfeit money in his possession, and on the indictment pending against him.

Dr. Lewis Frazee was arrested in Jonesville, Bartholomew county. When the Dr. was arrested, he attempted to conceal a quantity of bogus half dollars behind a log. He acknowledged his connection with the gang, but said that he had been drawn into it by Patterson. He was handed over to U. S. Commissioner Orr, of this city, who committed him in default of $2,000 bail. Dr. Frazee has undoubtedly been seed well into these concertions by design. edly been seduced into these operations be designing men. Correspondence as to dealing with the gang was found upon him.

Dr. Allen Robinson was next arrested at Muncie-town, a man near 60 years of age. He has before been arrested for dealing in counterfeit bank notes, but turning State's evidence was discharged. On his person and in a bureau drawer in his house were found counterfeit coin and bank notes from ten cents up to $50. The following is a description of the bank notes: North Western Bank, Virginia, debank notes: North Western Bank, Virginia, denomination $10—some new and others soiled for circulation; State Bank of Indiana $10's; Northern Bank, Kentucky, $10's; Bank of Corning, N. Y., $10's; Onio Stock Bank $5's; Mercantile Bank, Hartford, Conn., $5's; Exchange Bank, Hartford, $1's; Farmers' Bank, Indiana, $10's; North Carolina Bank $50's. Three bogus half dollars were found in his office, beside a galvanic battery, just prepared for circulation. Counterfeit dimes and also spurious gold dollars were discovered about his premises. The whole amount found was $743 70. premises. The whole amount found was $743 70. This man was taken before the U. S. Commissioner at Rushville and committed in default of $2,000

Crucibles for melting were found at Dr. Robinson's, but no dies. A lot of new cents, of the late issue, were found in his possession, which were undoubtedly intended to be used for making the composition for counterfeit coin. Mr. Reany says that new counterfeit bills were put in circulation the same day in Rush, Henry, Decatur, and Bartholo-mew counties that they were in Kentucky and Indi-ana, thus proving the extent of the organization and the perfect understanding the members of the gang had with each other.

These developments in crime, in connection with others through various portions of the country, are

4. The security of the railroad transit.

Nothing definite has been settled between General Herran and General Cass except in regard to the matter of indemnity, upon which point a basis of arrangement has been agreed to. The second and third points are still under discussion.

The fourth and most difficult question of all, has not yet been espicially dealt with—indeed, it can scarcely be said to have been yet under discussion. The cession of a portion of the Isthmus to the United States is looked upon as desirable in many respects—but constitutional questions arise here as to the power of the United States to acquire any sort of control over it, unless it is to be acquired with a view to admission as a State into the Union. These are difficulties which does not seem to have presented themselves at all to the late Administration, but are urged with a good deal of earnestness by some at this time.

It is impossible to foreshadow the result of the negotiation, for the President himself has not yet determined upon the proper course to be pursued; but, in any event, the subject will not be disposed of so speedily as many seem to have anticipated.

BILL, NOTE, AND LETTER HOLDER.—The above unique and very practical invention will supply a deficiency long felt in the counting-room and among all classes of business men. It consists of a series of pockets, in alphabetical order, so arranged as to spread out like a fan and exhibit at one view the who series. When closed it presents the form of a neat compact book, well protected by strong handsome covers, and of such limited compass as to be easily carried in the pocket or laid in a pigeon-hole of the desk or safe. So complete an arrangement cannot fall to commend itself to every business man.

A COUPLE OF NOBLE VISITORS .- Among the pas sengers by the steamer Europa, at Boston, are two young English noblemen, who have probably come over to make the tour of the States. They are Lord Althorp and Lord Hervey. The first is the son and heir of Earl Spencer, a descendent of the great Duke of Marlborough, and a nephew of Viscount Althorp, the distinguished statesman who was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Melbourne Administration. Lord Hervey is the second son of the Marquis of Bristol. They are both quite young men, under 25, and unmarried.

The number of warrants issued from the Pension Office during July, under the Bounty Land Act of March, 1855, is 2,185; to satisfy which nearly 322,000 acres are necessary. To satisfy the 201,000. warrants issued since the passage of the act, 26,250,-000 acree of land are required.

THE CHECKARRA, A NEW VARIETY OF PEA.—
Messrs. Editors: A communication from our Minister resident near the Argentine confederation was reresident near the Argentine confederation was received on the 22d June at the Patent Office. It was accompatied by a bag containing specimens of a new variety of pea. Happening to be in Washington three days after the peas were received, I was favored with a perusal of the Minister's letter and allowed to make the copy which is given below; and, although in compliance with the suggestion received in the companion referred to, almost contained in the communication referred to, almost all the peas had been put up in parcels of small size for transmission to Texas, I succeeded in obtaining for transmission to Texas, I succeeded in obtaining stificient for a small experiment in this latitude.

The peas are different in shape from any that I have seen cultivated; and of a dirty white color, of very irregular shape, and many of them bear a close resemblance to discolored human teeth—sufficiently so to have passed muster with Cadmus, though doubtless productive of a far more peaceful crop than sprung from his famous sowing. As an account of this novelty, as it appears to be, among a very useful class of vegetables, may prove agreeable to many of your readers, the copy of the communication I have mentioned is subjoined.

E. L. R., Baltimore, Md.
G. Chicharras, or Spanish peas, cultivated by Capt.
Gazzam, late of Alabama, at Las Acacias, near Nueva Palmyra, or Higuenitas, on the Uruguay river, Banda Oriental, South America.

This is a small white pea, much crowded in the pod, and is hard, with a shriveled appearance, and is said to produce as high as one thousand for one.
It is planted in drills with a hoe. The ground should be well broken up two inches deep, four feet between the rows, sown as thickly as common garden peas. Generally the time of planting and manner are the same as required for other peas but they require bushes or trellisses to run on. They cover the greund when matured in a dense mat of vines.
They are not killed by light frost, therefore may be They are not killed by light frost, therefore may be planted early. They appear to flourish best in rich black dry soil. About three quarts of seed produced thirteen bushels. These were cultivated in about 30 deg. south latitude. The soil of Texas and Louisiana would be well adapted to their growth.

To Prepare for Cooking.—The dried peas must be soaked all night, say eight or ten hours, boiled an hour, thrown into cold water, and then the skin rubbed off with the hand. They may then be cooked half an hour, without salt. They form when cooked a thick yellow pulpy mass, far exceeding in richness and sweetness any other pea or bean.

I have seen a small portion ground in a common steel mill. They appear to be easily prepared in this way, and the skins or pellicles easily winnowed, like those of the hominy of the Indian corn in our Southern States. They would probably mix well with flour and make a good bread. Capt. Gazzam informs me that this method of grinding answers well. He says: "Grind them coarsely, throw them into water—the husks swim, the solid part sinks, and the former may be removed by the hand, skimmed from the top; the water poured off, they are then fit for boiling, and require less than half the time to cook."

FARMING NEAR LARGE CITIES .- No profession more sternly requires the exercise of economy than that of the farmer, and during the last ten years the improvements in methods of culture have been so rapid that those who have not kept pace with such advance in economic culture can scarcely compete with their more energetic neighbors. Enterprising farmers residing near large cities are becoming like merchants and are adapting themselves growing of such crops as pay large profits and such as cannot be brought from great distances. It is quite curious, however, even at this date, to observe many of the farmers near large cities and towns who still continue on in the old style to grow hay, outs, corn, and potatoes, the latter not often includ-ed, for fear too many will be raised for the demand, while an energetic gardener in their neighborhood will realize larger profits on two or three acres of root crops than does the farmer of one hundred acres with his regular crops, as he would call them, being an exact copy of the crops of his great-grand-father before the demand of the city called for those of a different character.

First, then, the farmer should inquire what crops are wanted at the highest prices, or rather what crops will give the greatest amount of produce per acre. If he can obtain 50 cents, or even 30 cents per bushel for carrots, he cannot afford to raise hay at $30 per ton for sale. If he can get 75 cents for potatoes, he cannot afford to raise oats at 50 cents per bushel, nor corn at 80 cents. If beets can be sold at 50 cents per bushel, or onions at $1 per bushel, or abhages at $4 per bughed. cabbages at $4 per hundred, he cannot afford to raise wheat or rye at the usual market prices. If he be a stock grower, he will have a market at home for many of the root crops at four times the profit which could possibly accrue from the same land de-voted to what are usually termed the staple crops; and to those who refuse to alter their style of crops, in the fear that too many may do the same thing, and the prices thereby be reduced, we would say that the same fear in relation to potatoes has been expressed for the last twenty years, and still every year they have proved to be among the more profita-ble crops, and notwithstanding that carrots can be grown at the rate of a thousand bushels per acre by those who pursue the improved methods of culture still they have been and continue to be sold at as great a price per bushel as oats, and when their true value shall be understood thousands of acres will be devoted to their culture that are now devoted to other crops .- Working Farmer.

ON DRYING APPLES, PEACHES, PLUMS, AND OTHER FRUIT—Among the good things which cannot be considered merely as luxuries, but which our habits, if not our natures, have rendered necessary to a high degree of health, fruit is not unimportant. a high degree of health, fruit is not unimportant. The art of preserving it by drying may to some persons appear too simple to require the explanation of any process; nevertheless few housekeepers are so well skilled in these matters that they may not learn something of value and interest by the experience and practices of others.

Fruit, of different kinds, evidently requires different treatment. Apples should be pared and those of medium size cut in eight or ten pieces and dried quickly by the fire; cutting them tiner makes more surface to be rinsed, and the more water that is used for this purpose the more is the flavor washed away.

Pear: and gooseberries (the latter before they are very ripe) are better stewed tender in one-fifth their weight of sugar and a little water, and dried after the liquor is boiled thick and poured over them. Cherries should be stoned and scalded in their own juice, without sugar, and dried slowly. The method of drying plums in the sun after opening and stoning them, without scalding or sugar, probably cannot be surpassed. Strawberries, raspherries, and cannot be surpassed. Strawberries, raspberries, and currants retain most of their original flavor when mashed with one-fourth or one-fifth their weight of masned with one-router or one-ind their weight of sugar and dried as quickly as possible without scalding them. Pumpkin should be stewed till quite dry, sifted and spread on buttered plates, and, when partially dried, broken fine, that it may soak quickly in milk when wanted for use.
